A Conversation between the President and a Senator.

The President Doubts the Propriety of any Further Amendment to the Constitution.

Recent Change in the Virginia State Government to a Provisional Basis.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.

The following is the substance of a conversation which took place to-day between the President and a distinguished Senator.

The President said he doubted the propriety of making any further amendment to the Constitution. One great element had already been made by which the Government had been abolished within the limits of the United States, and a new Government had been established in the place of the old one.

The President said that the issue was never again to be raised in the land. He said that the Constitution was never to be amended.

The President said that the issue was never again to be raised in the land. He said that the Constitution was never to be amended.
